Subject: An Opportunity

I regret to inform you that despite the best efforts of General Galactic's modern medical science, your wife's prognosis is rather dire. The infection has now reached her lungs and soon it will spread to her brain. I'm sorry, but there is very little we can do for her now.

That is, unless you would like to consider digitization. You see, I chair the artificial intelligence program at GG and we are always looking for suitable candidates for uploading. The process is relatively simple, we just require your wife's brain.

After we're done with her, it will be like she never died. Think about it.

Yours,

Dr. Charles Womac
